Vienna, June 23.

M. Stepney, Count Rechteren, and M. Bruyning, Ministers Mediators of England and Holland, having receiv'd at Tyrnau the Demands of the Malecontents in 23 Articles, gave them to the Bishop of Osnabrug (as the Emperor's first Plenipotentiary) at Presbourg, and he sent an Express with them hither. From Presbourg the said Ministers Mediators came hither, and are urgent with the Imperial Court, that they may have an Answer to carry back to Hungary as soon as may be. The Emperor and his Council have since had these Demands frequently under their Consideration: We cannot yet inform our selves rightly of the Particulars of those Demands, but 'tis talk'd at Court that they may be divided into 3 Sorts; one sort are such as cannot fairly be refus'd them, another such as the Emperor would shew himself a kind Father of his People in granting, the third sort are such as his Imperial Majesty will in all likelihood reject: To this last Class are suppos'd to belong the following Demands, viz. That the fortified Places of Hungary shall be garrison'd with native Hungarians only; that none but Natives of the Kingdom shall be capable of any publick Trust or Office; and that the Principality of Transilvania shall be yielded to Prince Ragotski. 'Tis said Count Berezeni demands to be made Palatine and Commander in Chief of the Forces of Hungary; that the Malecontents have demanded little or nothing in Favour of the Protestant Religion; and that Count Berezeni is so little a Friend to the Protestants, tho' the Troops of the Malecontents are made up chiefly of them, that he has given all the Commands in those Troops to Papists. As for the Guaranty the Malecontents demand, the Imperial Court are not averse to that of England and Holland, but will not hear of any other. Yesterday the Bishop of Osnabrug and Count Wratislaw came hither from Presbourg.

From the Leid. Gaz. & Amst. Cour. dated July 10 & 13.

Vienna, June 26. An Abstract of the Demands of the Malecontents of Hungary, is handed about here; and contains in Substance. 1. That a Guaranty be agreed on both sides, for the Performance of the Treaty. 2. That the Principality of Transilvania be yielded to Prince Ragotski and his Descendants for ever, free from any Dependance on Hungary. 3. That the Resolutions of the Diets of Oedenburgh and Presbourg be annull'd. 4. That all Foreign Troops be withdrawn out of the Kingdom. 5. That the Palatine and other Officers be restor'd to the free and uncontroll'd exercise of their several Offices. 6. That a General be establish'd with like independant Powers. 7. That the Chamber and the Royal Fiscal be suppress'd, and a Treasurer establish'd instead of them. 8. That the Crown of Hungary, and the other Regalia, be kept at Muram as formerly. 9. That the Affairs of the Chancey be put upon a good Foot. 10. That the publick Offices and Employments be given only to Hungarians. 11. That the Affairs of Religion be re-establish'd on the ancient foot. 12. That the Jesuits be expell'd the Kingdom. 13. That the common Administration of Justice be regulated. 14. That such who have been unjustly depriv'd of their Estates be restor'd thereunto. 15 and 16. That the Revenues of the Crown be not alienated to the Prejudice of the Kingdom. 17. That Copper Money be cryed down. 18. That no Peace or War be concluded without the Consent of the Palatine of the Kingdom. 19. That a general Indemnity be given to the Hungarian Nation. 20. That Prince Ragotski and Count Berezini have particular Satisfaction made them. 21. That the Rights of the Nobility be regulated, as also the limits of the Kingdom. 22. That the Laws and Liberties of the Nation be re-establish'd and maintain'd. 23. And that all the Articles of Peace now negociated be ratify'd and put in Execution.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated July 13.

Vienna, June 30. We hear the Malecontents, (besides the Demands we have already given an Account of) insist upon the following Points, viz. That not only England and Holland, but likewise the Crowns of Sweden, Poland, and Prussia, and the Republick of Venice, may be Guarantees of the Treaty. The Resolutions of the Diet of Presburg which they would have annull'd, are those of the Diet that was held in 1687, in which the Kingdom of Hungary was made Hereditary in the House of Austria. They demand, that what was reconquer'd from the Turks in the last War, be incorporated with the Kingdom of Hungary and be under the same Government; that the Copper Money which the Malecontents have coin'd since the Insurrection, shall be chang'd for Silver, and the Loss made good out of the Revenues of Hungary; that a kind of Parliament or supreme Court of Justice for trying Causes in the last Resort shall be erected in Hungary; that the Protestants shall be restor'd to the possession of their Churches; that all Jesuites, not Natives of the Kingdom, depart the Country, and that the Jesuites that are Natives be limited to a certain Number; that the Grants the Heads of the Malecontents have made to any of their Party during this Insurrection, be confirm'd; that the Clergy who have been depriv'd of their Benefices shall be restor'd; that all the Grants made by the Emperor of the Estates of Hungarians, be resum'd; and that all the Records, and Papers, relating to the ancient noble Families, be restor'd to them. The 28th Instant, the Ministers Mediators, the Bishop of Osnabrug, and Count Wratislaw, set out for Presburg and Tirnau, to communicate to the Malecontents, by Word of Mouth and in Writing, the Emperor's Answer to their Propositions. In Case they reject these his Imperial Majesty's last Offers, 'tis talk'd that both those Offers and the Demands of the Malecontents will be printed together and made publick, that the World may judge of them. In the mean time the Archbishop of Colocza is come hither, and in Discourse with the Imperial Ministers has intimated, that some of the Propositions of the Malecontents may be too hard for the Emperor to comply with, but that they had demanded nothing but what was their Right, tho' he doubted not they would content themselves with less. If this Negociation with the Malecontents come to nothing, 'tis said the Ministers Mediators will publish a Remonstrance, in which they will shew clearly to the Hungarians, that some of their Leaders seek only their own private Advantage, not the common Good of their Country.

The

The Harlem Courant of July 17, in the Paragraph from Vienna of the 3d ditto, says the Malecontents have (among the reſt) made the following Demands. 1. That Prince Ragotski be made tributary Prince of Tranſilvania, on Condition of Paying yearly to the Emperor double the Sum he now receives from thence. 2. That they be allow'd at their own Expence to put Garriſons of their own into the fortified Places of Hungary now in their Hands. 3. That Count Berezeni be made Vice-Palatine. 4. That if the Emperor Joſeph leave no Male Iſſue behind him, the Succeſſion of the Kingdom of Hungary ſhall not deſcend to King Charles; ſeeing in the Capitulation made at the Corona ion at Presbourg, only Leopold and Joſeph with their Deſcendants, are nominated. 'This laſt Article is a Contradiction in it ſelf; for if by the Capitulation of Presbourg the Deſcendants of Leopold are to inherit the Crown of Hungary, it muſt of Courſe come to King Charles ſhould the preſent Emperor Joſeph dye without Male-Iſſue.

From the Amſterdam Courant, dated July 13.

Vienna, June 30. The Emperor has been often preſent at the Conferences held upon the Affairs of Hungary; and the Archbiſhop of Colocza has had an Audience of him, of an Hour and a half long. The Miniſters Mediators that are gone from hence with the Biſhop of Oſnabrug and Count Wratiſlaw, will go on from Tirnau to Neuheuſel, to endeavour to diſpoſe the Prince and Princeſs Ragotski to embrace the Emperors Offers of Peace; by repreſenting to them, that the Emperor grows daily more able to reduce the Hungarians by Force, while the King of France is quite diſabled from ſupporting them effectually by making ſome Diverſion in their Favour. That that King's Promiſe to include them in a general Peace, is of no Value; becauſe 'tis very likely he will have enough to do to manage his own Affairs, and that he muſt take the beſt Conditions he can get for himſelf, without pretending to preſcribe them to others. In a few Days we ſhall ſee the Iſſue of all this Buſineſs; in the mean time great Preparations of War are made on both ſides. Count Palfi is gone to Croatia to draw together a Body of the Troops of that Country; General Raburin, in caſe the Treaty come to nothing, will immediately act upon the Tibiſcus; General Nehem is to move towards Buda with 8 Troops of German Horſe, and 12 or 14000 Raſcians; and General Scaremberg will act in the lower Hungary with 9000 Imperialiſts: On the other Hand, the Malecontents are providing with no leſs Diligence for oppoſing Force with Force.
